Dear Dr. Postma,

Your manuscript entitled "Randomized evaluation of short-term dual antiplatelet therapy in patients with acute coronary syndrome treated with the COMBO dual therapy stent (REDUCE) trial" has been successfully submitted online and is presently being given full consideration for publication in BMJ.

Your manuscript ID is BMJ.2018.043839.

Thank you for considering The BMJ as the right place for your article. All material submitted for publication must be submitted exclusively to The BMJ. We expect that all authors included on a paper fulfill the ICMJE criteria for authorship http://www.icmje.org/recommendations/browse/roles-and-responsibilities/defining-the-role-of-authors-and-contributors.html and that there is no one else who fulfills the criteria but has not been included as an author.

We aim to give a decision on papers that are not sent for external review (about 60%) within two weeks and on papers that are sent for external review within eight weeks, but if we take a little longer than this please bear with us. Sometimes a paper needs reading by more editors than usual, and sometimes reviewers can be a little slow.

The BMJ has a system of open peer review. You will be told who has assessed your paper. This does not mean, however, that you should contact reviewers directly to discuss your paper - please direct any queries through us as usual. For Research papers we use fully open peer review - please see additional policies below.

We are constantly trying to find ways of improving our peer review system and continually monitor processes and methods by including article submissions and reviewers' reports in our research. If you do not wish your paper or review entered into a our peer review research programme, please let us know by emailing papersadmin@bmj.com as soon as possible.

Please may we remind you not to talk to the media about manuscripts under consideration at The BMJ. Abstracts may be presented at meetings, but we expect authors not to disclose any additional information in the event of press interest. More details of our press policy can be found at http://www.bmj.com/about-bmj/resources-media

When in doubt ask for advice from our press officer.

Please mention the above manuscript ID in all future correspondence or when calling the office with https://mail.google.com/mail/u/0/?ui=2&ik=bd8db3d790&jsver=iM8e9KVjh8k.cn.&view=...  4/2/2018 questions. If there are any changes in your street address or e-mail address, please log in to ScholarOne Manuscripts at http://mc.manuscriptcentral.com/bmj and edit your user information as appropriate. You can also view the status of your manuscript at any time by checking your Author Centre after logging in to http://mc.manuscriptcentral.com/bmj.

We remind you that The BMJ has an open peer review process, in which authors know who the peer reviewers were. Reviewers agree to have their names and comments published if the paper is accepted by The BMJ, but not otherwise.

Until publication, all manuscripts and peer review and editorial comments are considered privileged communications. If your paper is rejected after peer review, we expect that you will keep the identity and comments of the peer reviewers for this paper confidential. You may, however, share the peer review comments in confidence (though not the names of the peer reviewers) with other journals to which you submit the paper. If you have any complaints about the peer review process or the conduct of the peer reviewers, please contact the editor who handled your paper. Please do not contact the reviewers directly. If you do not agree with these requirements, please let us know so that we can withdraw your paper from consideration.

If your article is a Research paper, please note these additional policies:

FULLY OPEN PEER REVIEW FOR RESEARCH: The BMJ has a system of open peer review for all types of paper, so you will be told who has assessed your paper. For research papers The BMJ uses fully open peer review: if your paper is accepted we will post its pre-publication history alongside it on thebmj.com.

This pre-publication history will comprise all previous versions of the manuscript, the study protocol (submitting the protocol is mandatory for all clinical trials and encouraged for all other studies at The BMJ), the report from the manuscript committee meeting, the reviewers’ signed comments, and the authors’ responses to all the comments from reviewers and editors.

All research papers should include declarations of competing interests, study funding, and ethics approval. In addition, the BMJ requires a transparency declaration for each research paper [see BMJ 2013;347:f4796]; a statement that the lead author (the manuscript’s guarantor) affirms that the manuscript is an honest, accurate, and transparent account of the study being reported; that no important aspects of the study have been omitted; and that any discrepancies are disclosed.

If we ultimately offer to publish your article the BMJ will ask you to pay an Open Access publication fee. This is to help us support our Open Access model for research content. If we accept your paper we will write to you again to ask for the fee; we do have a waiver policy for authors who cannot pay. Consideration of research articles is not related to ability to pay the fee, and we ask authors not to discuss with editors any issues concerning payment at any stage of the peer review process. Any communications related to fees are handled by administrative staff not involved in decisions about manuscripts. The fee is £3000/ $4800 + VAT.

Some institutions have taken out Open Access Membership with BMJ Journals, which either covers the cost of open access publishing for authors at participating institutes, or allows authors to receive a discount on the open access article publication fee. Please visit our open access page http://journals.bmj.com/site/authors/openaccess.xhtml to see a full list of participating institutions, find out if you are eligible and how to obtain your discount code.

Thank you again for submitting your manuscript to BMJ.

Yours sincerely

EDITOR

The BMJ
PS. What did you think of the article submission process?
At BMJ, we constantly strive to improve our services for authors and value your feedback. We'd really like to hear your opinions as part of our on-going efforts, and we'd be grateful if could take a few minutes to fill out our short survey. Your responses will, of course, remain confidential and you won't be identified in any results.

Please click on this link to access the survey: https://www.surveymonkey.co.uk/r/VMXSQGP