1. Introduction

The success of laws or statute depends on whether it can achieve the objectives outlined by the legislators. The objectives of various statutes of laws vary according to the needs of the society. For example, the Malaysian Child Act 2001 was enacted to protect children in Malaysia. Though the primary purpose of the statute is to protect children, society is expected to know about the statute, its existence, and its purpose of the law. The legislators also need to ensure the effectiveness of the law through the enactment of a statute. Thus, awareness of the existence and the success of the statute is important for the Malaysian community to comply with the law, to prevent the society from being negatively impacted by the law. The law is also expected to ensure the effectiveness of the law through the enactment of a statute.
