Race, ethnicity and nationalism are at heart of many of the major social and political issues in the present world. New authors have emerged which require a rethinking of traditional theoretical and empirical perspectives. Ethnic and Racial Studies, an interdisciplinary academic forum for the presentation of research and theoretical analysis, drawing on sociology, social policy, anthropology, political science, economics, geography, international relations, history, social psychology and cultural studies. From 2014 two issues will be dedicated to Ethnic and Racial Studies Review offering expert guidance to the latest research.

Ethnic and Racial Studies welcomes contributions from both established and younger scholars working in any of the main or related fields. Authors are advised to submit articles of empirical focus as well as contributions at the cutting edge of theoretical debates in this field. All submissions, which normally fall between 5000 and 8000 words, are peer reviewed to a high standard.

Notes to contributors

Articles that are submitted must be original and should not be simultaneously under consideration - either in whole or in part - for publication elsewhere. No more than one article by the same author/co-author will be published within a two year period. Authors must declare any conflicts of interest. Submissions are refereed anonymously. To facilitate this process authors should ensure that articles include an ABSTRACT of their article of up to 150 words maximum and up to six keywords, suitable for indexing and online searching.

All communications should be sent to Ethnic and Racial Studies, ScholarOne Manuscripts website: http://mc.manuscriptcentral.com/ers. Clear instructions are provided throughout the submission process.

Reviews: These are normally solicited by the Editors. It is therefore advisable not to prepare book reviews without prior consultation with them. Books for review should be sent to: Ethnic and Racial Studies, Department of Sociology, University of Warwick, PO Box 383, Coventry CV4 7AL, United Kingdom.

Copyright: It is a condition of publication that authors assign copyright or license the publication rights in their articles, including abstracts and summary, to Taylor & Francis. This enables us to ensure full copyright protection and to disseminate the article, and of course our journals, to the widest possible readership in print and electronic formats as appropriate. Authors may, of course, use the article for promotional purposes, or for the purposes of their own teaching and research, or for use in non-commercial libraries, provided that the article is accompanied by a clear notice that it is ‘Copyright @ [name of author] [year], and the author is fully credited as the original author. Authors may post the final published article on their own personal or institutional web site. Authors are responsible for obtaining permission to reproduce any material from other sources.

Attention is drawn to the fact that the acceptance of an article, report or review is conditional upon its author or authors assured that it contains nothing which is unlawful. Agreement by authors to the publication of their material necessarily implies acceptance of this condition.
