ABSTRACT

Consumer right to safety is one of the rights that has been recognised universally. The view of protecting the basic rights of consumer is widely accepted through the promulgation and effective enforcement of consumer protection policies and legislation. Product safety regulations are aimed to prevent dangerous products from reaching the market or the consumer and inform the consumer on how to use the products safely. At the same time, product safety regulations also protect consumers against unreasonable, unacceptable and preventable risks. In Islamic perspective, the concept of ḥalālan ṭayyiban and maqāṣīd shari‘ah are the main indicator in product safety regulation. This article will review the literature on the concept of consumer protection and product safety regulation in Malaysian and Shariah legislation.

Keywords: product safety, ḥalālan ṭayyiban, maqāṣīd al-Shari‘ah.
