CENTRE OF QUR'ANIC RESEARCH LOGO

The rounded shape of the logo is formed of the first letter of the word (Quran). The letter Q in the logo represents both the perimeter and the diameter of the highest area of interest of the Centre of Quranic Research and its area of specialization. The blue color in the logo is one of the colors used in University Malaya logo as well as the flag of Malaysia. The base of the letter Q shows two parallel lines, the first is connected to the letter indicating the source of the Quran while the second is connected with other three rounded shapes underneath representing both the direction and field of Quranic research being connected with modern sciences. The background of the letter Q reflects a panel of electronic information connoting modern technological instruments. The letter Q also reflects a large manuscript of the Quran indicating the major interest of the CQR in the Quran. The margins of the Quran manuscript are divided into two parts, the upper denotes scholarly contributions of early Muslims to both the exegesis of the Quran and the various disciplines of the Glorious Qur'an. The lower part is left empty to refer to future scholarly contributions in relation to Quran and modern sciences. The light highlighting the manuscript shows research instrument in the form of a magnifier with a holder implying the existence of pairs in all of God's creation as stated in the Quran (That has created pairs in all things) Chapter Al-Zukhruf, 43:12. The right side of letter Q holds the name of the centre in English (Centre of Quranic Research), abbreviated as (CQR) and read in Arabic as saq (i.e., eagle). The abbreviated letters are written in the three rounded shapes under letter Q. Whereas the Arabic name of the centre is written in the left side of the letter. The two tales of the letter provide the CQR date of establishment in both Hijri and Gregorian calendars (1431 A.H. - 2010 C.E.)
