Dear Dr. Kambali,

The expedited review of the resubmitted essay “The role of comparative religion curricula in intra-inter civilizational dialogue” is completed. We would like to publish your essay in the second or third issue of 2013.

We appreciate the ways you have responded to reviewer’s concerns and still maintained your own perspectives. In fact, we see very little editing that needs to be done for publication. The manuscript should be double spaced in new times roman 12 pt. type. (I have included a style sheet, but you may not find it fully helpful. I am not worried because the article is in good shape.) One question, are you in fact proposing such a department at your university. If so, it would be useful to let the reader know you are making a policy statement here as a department is built within your university. Moreover, have you thought about who might teach these courses proposed. It might be wise to have participants in other faith communities represent their own positions.

Do let me know if you agree to having your essay published in March/April or May/June issues of 2013. I will try to get it published in the earliest possible issue. I will need a final copy of the article no later than September 2012.

When you send it, please include the following:

1. submission checklist form (please send by email attachment);
2. an electronic copy of the article (also send by email attachment to jack.seymour@garrett.edu);
3. two final copies of the article as you revise it including an abstract and author information in the article (please send copies by regular mail); and
4. the attached copyright form (please sign and send hard copy by mail).

Please send the materials to me at the following address:
