SERVICE LEARNING BROUGHT TO SRI LANKA

By A.R. Dr. Chandra Rupasinghe

The aim of the study is to provide the trainees with an opportunity to improve their soft skills such as leadership, teamwork, time management and communication, etc. by adapting modern teaching pedagogies, which are being practiced at the University of Malaya. This will help them adapt to the new environment while it will also help them in the future. Such training with the aid of technology will also promote the speed of learning in the young generation.

To this effect, the trainees will have to be trained on the University of Malaya’s E-Bulletin system. The system is an internal e-mail system that is used by the University to communicate important messages to the students and staff. The system is also used to schedule exams and other important events. The trainees will be trained on how to use the system to communicate with the students and staff. They will also be trained on how to schedule exams and other important events.

The trainees will also be trained on how to use the university’s online library. The library is an important resource for the students and staff. The trainees will be trained on how to use the library to find relevant information and resources.

The trainees will also be trained on how to use the university’s online learning platform. The platform is an important resource for the students and staff. The trainees will be trained on how to use the platform to access course materials, submit assignments, and take tests.

The trainees will also be trained on how to use the university’s online access system. The access system is an important resource for the students and staff. The trainees will be trained on how to use the access system to access the university’s online resources.